A mental health crisis is when you feel at breaking point and need urgent help. You might be:

feeling uncontrollably anxious or having flashbacks; feeling suicidal or self-harming; feeling very high (sometimes called hypomania or mania); hearing voices, hallucinating, or feeling very paranoid.

These experiences can be because you're dealing with bereavement, past traumas, addiction, being abused, money problems, relationship breakdown, workplace stress, exam stress, or a housing problem. Or you might not know why you're feeling severely distressed.

If you are in crisis, phone 111 and option 2.
